The other verses

2 The morning dawns at His command,
And lights the world o'er sea and land;
And upwards, see the sun arise,
To shed its glories from the skies.

3 But falls the twilight o'er our heads,
And night its sable curtain spreads;
For all His kingly words obey, —
The dark of night, the light of day.

4 O heavenly King, in every soul,
The darkness of our night control;
And 'mid the blackness of that night,
Speak Thou the word, "Let there be light."

5 And as the morn from darkness springs,
To speed to earth on silent wings,
A dawn more glorious shall awake,
And bright upon our spirits break.

6 O Sun of Righteousness, arise,
And fill our souls with glad surprise;
Nor into dark of night decline,
But aye at noontide brightly shine.

7 All glory to the God of Might,
And to the Son, the Light of light;
And to the Spirit, Three in One,
Eternal while the ages run.
