closing, silent tomb, The bleeding heart distils the tear, Though love its humble soul would say, In lowly dust, "Thy will be done."

The other verses

2 Whate'er, O Lord, thou hast designed
To bring my soul to thee in trust,
If miseries or afflictions kind, —
For all thy dealings, Lord, are just, —
Take all, but grant, in goodness free,
That love which ne'er thy stroke should shun;
Support this heart and strengthen me
To say in faith, "Thy will be done."
